WHEELING, OCTOBER 9, 1891.

After Natural Gas---What? In communities which have enjoyed the convenience of natural gas there is now much uneasiness over the prospect for the near future. There will be an end of natural gas drawn from the present source of supply. This much is certain, for nature is not making the gas as rapidly as man is using it. What most interests Wheeling is to know how long natural gas will be available in the field from which she is supplied, and after that supply is exhausted whether we shall have to return to coal for household and light manufacturing uses. The Natural Gas Company of West Virginia gives assurance that there will be gas enough for the uses to which it is now devoted. After that what?

The natural gas consuming communities went the more readily into the expenditure for piping because of the very general belief that when the natural gas failed the heavy investment in great plants would induce their owners to supply a satisfactory substitute in fuel gas. This hope, not abandoned, still gives consolation to the housekeeper, who would rejuctantly go back to the dirt and inconvenience of solid fuel.

Experiments looking to the substitute have been going on with an eye to the time when a good substitute would pay. Success is said to have attended some of these experiments, and the Low Pressure Gas Company, which supplies some of the boroughs near Pitts-burgh, gives notice that it is about to put one of the methods into use in the lines laid for natural gas.

The process is a combination of coal gas and petroleum, the latter being used to enrich the product for illuminating purposes. It is claimed for this gas that under the most favorable conditions it can be made for five cents a thousand cubic feet. An expert in the employ of Carnegie, Phipps & Co., who Calorific power at 60 deg. F and 30° 470.05 units. Wheeling pays fifteen cents a thousand cubic feet for natural gas. The difference between the estimated cost of fuel gas and this selling price, allowing for cost of distribution, would' seem in using its mains for the artificial product rather than go to the expense of taking them up. This is theview taken by the Pittsburgh company.

The Debate at Ada.

Governer Campbell and Major Me-Kinley have met and discussed, so far as either of them desired to discuss, the issues of the campaign in Ohio. It was a good opportunity for each of them to commend himself and his party to the people who heard him and to those who will read the reported speeches.

They are both able men. Governor Campbell is a pleasant talker when the conditions are favorable to him, but in this joint discussion, as all through the campaign, he was handicapped by declarations of his party which even an able man cannot make popular in Obio He was weighted, also, by his own early repudiation of the silver plank and the income tax plank of the Democratic platform.

Gov. Campbell has made the best of a bad situation. He said some smart things, but the people are thinking this year, and smart things will not wipe out the great array of obvious facts that stands in the way of Democratic success in Ohio. Of course Major McKinley made the best use of these stubborn

Keeping up its Kick.

The London Times gives Parnell's dead body a vicious kick. The Times should have been glad never to mention Parnell's name again after it had been convicted by an English court of grossly libelling him.

That newspaper stuck to its "Parnellism and Crime" long after everybody else was convinced that Pigott was a perjurer and his Parnell letters forgeries; stuck to the dirty business after the forgery had been proved beyond the shadow of a doubt.

Parnell before it knew that every word it printed on the line of the original accusation was a libel.

A newspaper which pretends to be what the Times does should be glad to pay the price of silence when the object of its malice lies cold in death.

Behind the Age.

A Kansas judge decides that an arrest made on a letter or telegram is not "due process of law." In this day fugitive criminals travel as fast as steam can carry them. If they cannot be overtaken by steam, or still better by electricity, the criminal has an unfair advantage of the society he has wronged.

The case before the Kansas judge was that of a murderer fleeing from justice. If he had not been overtaken by telegraph he would not have been overtaken at all. So long as a person accused of crime has a fair trial he should not be permitted to get up a femical technicality to prevent the law from bringing him to trial.

If the decision be good the law should be changed to harmonize with the changed conditions of the age, in which steam and electricity are factors for good

Hits Them Hard.

Of the resignation of Herman Oelrichs from the Democratic National Committee Tammany remarks that "it is of no consequence." Mr. Oelrichs. being asked whether he would spend money to defeat Mr. Flower, cheerfully replied, "I don't think I need to spend a nickel to accomplish that." Oelrichs is rubbing it in on Tammany and its candidate. His resignation was a bombshell and he is improving matters very fast-from his own point of view. Tammany has hasn't margin enough to stand this desertion in the face of the enemy.

Mr. Anney, whose name is associated with successful theatrical ventures, became so enthusiastic over the World's Fair that he put his name down on Chicago's subscription paper for $2,000. The generous act brought Mr. Abbey a good deal of high grade advertising without cost. He is now in a different frame of mind. His enthusiasm does not move him to pay his $2,000 and suit is to be brought against him. This again advertises Mr. Abbey. We are forced to conclude that Mr. Abbey is a shrewd man.

A DECISION of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania requires the street car companies of that city to pave from curb to curb the streets on which they run. This is not too high a price to pay for a free right of way already graded and protected at the public cost. When Wheeling's street car company wants something more from the city it will pay to bear in mind the Philadelphia

Pittsburgh wholesale liquor dealers and saloon keepers complain that a temperance wave has struck the business in that city. Very few saloons are making a living. Whisky drinking is becoming a lost art. This is good news from the once Smoky City.

SUMMER cars are very pleasant in the pleasant days of summer. In the raw rains of October they are death traps. The people should refuse to ride in them. If the company must run them let the company run them empty.

The idea that baldness may be due to headcear is confirmed by the experience of a Prussian physician. In the vicinity of Cassel he has noticed that the woman become bald earlier than the men, the cause appearing to be that the former wear a close and friction producing helmer, while the head covering of the men is a loose cap.

COL. ALEX CAMPBELL.

The Success He is Meeting With In Far Australasia—Rooming the Worlds Fair. Australia and New Zealand papers received by the Intelligencer contain lengthy and interesting interviews with Col. Alex Campbell, of Bethany, who as a special commissioner, is traveling among the countries of Australia in the interest of the Worlds Fair. Judging from the reports in the above mentioned papers Colonel Campbell is not only succeeding admirably in enthusing the governments of the "southern hemisphere." but the people as well. Wherever he has gone he has planted good seed. On reading the interviews with him one cannot but be impressed with the idea that the colonel has developed a wonderful genius as a "boomer." The eloquent manner in which he has described the glories of the United States in general and the magnitude of the Worlds Fair in particular has aroused the people of New Zealand and there is little doubt that the good effects of his work will be seen at the Worlds Fair. interest of the Worlds Fair. Judging

Fair.

A fair idea of how Colonel Campbell is getting in his work through the newspapers may be gained from the following extract from a column-and-a-half interview with him in the New Zealand Times of August 26:

"The Colonel does not forget to mention the Chicago hotels. 'Fourteen hundred of them there are.' We express our surprise, and thereupon we are asked if we have ever realized that a hundred thousand people pass through Chicago as visitors every day. It is borne in upon us that the four It is borne in upon us that the four-teen hundred hotels must be generally full. We are assured that the city will easily be able to make provision for the half million visitors expected during the Exhibition.

"'Will they come?' Why not, sir?'
It is not that the Americans rely on the attractions of Chicago itself. Its parks, drives, its 'auditorium' hotel, with hall large enough for 12,000 persons, and the other worders of the place; though these attractions are considerable. But these attractions are considerable. But there is much to supplement the local interest; Niagara Falls, the greatest waterfall in the world, and New York, the most wonderful capital, are within easy distance by rail.

"There is Washington also. The Col-onel branches off to tell us with that quiet sustained enthusiasm of his about Washington; a capital, the like of which does not exist height a purely political does not exist, being a purely political capital. He describes the magnificence does not exist, being a purely political capital. He describes the magnificence of the buildings, he dwells on the glories of the Capitol with its Grand Dome, its imperial terraces, its noble staircases, its glory of white marble shining in the sun. He grows eloquent over the two mile avenue grandly planted, by which the place is joined to the White House, where the President-lives in state; he expatiates on the magnificence of the buildings of the United States Treasury. One thing he tells us which rather startles the sense of freedom in the Anglo-Saxon breast. This great capital is not in any State of the Union; it is the centre of a district; the District of Columbia: and throughout that district no man has any political privilege of any kind; no franchise by which he can vote for the Chief Magistrate's election, or for the members of the Congress, or for any of the judicial offices which elsewhere are the subject of popular election."

where are the subject of popular election."

The Wellington, New Zealand, Post concludes a lengthy article about Col. onel Campbell's work as follows:

"Mr. Campbell speaks very hopefully of his mission, and states that so far he has encountered nothing but success. In Auckland he has received many assurances from manufacturers, growers of all kinds of products, and from producers of every description, and he feels assured the very liberal space set apart for the Australasian colonies will prove not a whit too large. The exhibits from these colonies will be kept quite distinct, and will form a series of courts which Mr. Campbell believes will be crowded daily. He throws out the suggestion that the New Zealand bay should include the exhibits of Fiji and other South Pacific islands. Our visitor leaves Wellington in a day or so, and on his way to Melbourne will visit every important town in this colony. Having completed his mission in Australasia, Mr. Campbell, in about four to six months' time, will return to America by one of the P. & O. steamers through the Sucz Canal."

The colonel's Wheeling friends will be glad to note that he is meeting with such great success in his mission.
